I have emailed my sister and brother and told them that I thought Dad was fine under the circumstances. Was panicking yesterday as feel my brother would be too quick to see him go into a home or worse. He has not seen eye to eye with Dad over the years, and because I am here in Vancouver, want to ensure can have someone is looking into his case to ensure that no doctors make the decision at any point to move him to psychiatric facilities.

That is my biggest fear as I can see that happening if there aren't checks and balances as my sister is easily influenced and been under a lot of strain as we just dealt with my Mom's cancer issue.

As far as I know Dad is only getting sleeping pills, but that I am not certain of. He has recovered from a head infection and his white blood count was very low which puzzled the doctors, almost like he had leukemia. However, he had a complete blood transfusion when he went to emergency to replace the blood he lost at the scene of the fall.

Dad also stated today that he just underwent two days psychiatric testing.

Thank you for the quick response and yes would appreciate someone in Winnipeg be able to monitor Dad's progress and introduce herself to Dad letting him know that she is being sent by Marlene, his daughter in Vancouver – that would please him immensely as I sensed panic in his voice the other day as he fears being put in such a place.

Dear Marlene;

On what bases are the psychiatrist stating your father is unable to live by himself besides the incompetent diagnose? I am sure there is more. What has your brother been told? Ask your brother to ask the psychiatrist(s) for the scientific research that shows that your father is incapable of looking after himself. What tests did the psychiatrist(s) base his/her reasons why your father is incompetent? You want to see the tests and the results.

You also need outside help from people who can state that your father is perfectly capable of looking after himself. A priest or minister, MP or MLA who knows your father. Is there anyone who lives close by who can state that your father is not incompetent and that he is capable of looking after himself. You may require a doctor to look at the tests and analysis the tests him/herself and administer the tests again to see if they get the same results.

Is he on any psychiatric drugs?

Can you get out to Winnipeg or talk to your brother not to be so hasty? Can the family afford a lawyer to fight for your father's rights?
