Hey Helene. Thanks for the info. We had a somewhat quiet weekend. Andy came home Friday night after spending 2 1/2 hours at the Headingley R.C.M.P. going over the rental agreement Marlene had made up. He called me at home when he left the R.C.M.P. station and asked me to phone Claire and Lyn to let them know that he told the police officer that he had no intentions of speaking to any family members on the weekend. He's sick and tired of this and just wants it to end. He just needed some peace and quiet. He was pretty tired when he got home so I made us supper and we were in bed by 9:30 if you can believe it. He has a real bad chest cold and the lack of sleep all week hasn't helped. I've managed to get him a doctor's appointment this afternoon so I hope he can make it. Saturday was rather pleasant. We went for coffee at a friend's shop - something we do fairly often but hadn't lately. Then in the afternoon Andy actually helped me put my kitchen cupboards back together. Longest paint job I've ever done! We went out for supper with those same friends on Saturday night and then went over to another friend's place to visit with his family that were in from California. At some point that night Roland Bouchard called Andy and said that he had been at the Esso in Elie and that Marlene was in there. He said she was sitting with Mike Slegers and Roland said he heard a good portion of the conversation. He said she was bad mouthing Andy and telling Slegers something about Andy and your dad's land agreement, things like the house was a pig sty (if only she had seen it before we cleaned it) and lots of other nasty stuff. Roland said he heard Slegers say that he didn't have any such agreement with his kids and when it was family you didn't need one. This was surprising, since Slegers and your dad don't get along at all. Something to do with fish. Andy said if her motive is a small claim against the church she should go after Mike instead since he got tons of money when he sold his farm to Norm Fleury. Anyway, Roland said he heard her say that she wasn't allowed to go and see your dad so she was sitting and waiting to see if someone would bring him for coffee. Roland was concerned so he went to see your dad and he said 'Uncle was scared' so I guess they phoned the R.C.M.P. Apparently the R.C.M.P. showed up at the Esso and told Marlene to leave and not have contact with your dad. And of course now she is blaming Andy for all this when he didn't even talk to anyone all weekend. We actually tried to go shopping on Sunday and he was so sick we had to come home early. Speaking of sick, did I tell you I am sick of this too? How many times do we have to tell her he will stay where he is? What do we care. He's lived there for this long and not paid rent. That's what you get for trying to keep a little family history!
