

October 26, 2010

My name is Angie Brinkworth. I work as a lab technician at the hospital in Winnipeg.

I have known Lionel Bouchard for many years. In his absence in March 17, 2010, I represented him at a teleconference hearing in Winnipeg to set aside three protection orders against Andy Bouchard, Lynda Staub and Claire Demery which had been granted to Mr. Bouchard on an ex-parte order.

Eased on my personal experience and all the information on record, and my knowledge and association with Lionel over the years, it is more than obvious that Lionel Bouchard is in dire need of a protection order as he has been harassed, had his property destroyed, his van confiscated, been chased out of the province for fear of his life, and in constant fear of being committed by those three children aforementioned. He has suffered psychological and emotion abuse over the past five years which are not likely to stop anytime soon.

The protection orders need to be reinstated immediately; otherwise I greatly fear that harm will come to Lionel at the hands of Andy Bouchard, Lynda Staub and Claire Demery as I no reason to believe that these children will leave their father alone, especially in light of the fact that the protection orders were set aside. The fact that Lynda Staub has already requested the transcript of the judge's decision on September 16, if proof that she intends to use the decision to present to mental health workers or other court appointed officials to harass or continue their quest to make their father a ward of the public trustee as in the three affidavits they presented to the court.

Angie Brinkworth

